

Assistant Residence Life Manager (ARLM) 2016-2017

Name: Daniel Brisebois

Current Role:

Residence Manager at
UBC

Why did you chose to become an ARLM? I chose to become an ARLM because of some of the experiences I had as a first year student which helped me to form and develop some of my personal values and career aspirations. Throughout my time at university I became increasingly aware of how much the student experience is affected by everything from a students first day of university when they move into residence to the day that they graduate from their institution. I am committed to helping staff members build strong and insightful relationships so that they are able to help support their students as they transition from high school to university. This includes everything from helping them in times of need and academic distress to providing them with the skills and resources to be able to help out future students who find themselves in similar places of need.

What do you love best about your role: The thing that I love most about my job is being able to coach and mentor staff to help them reach their fullest potential in both their roles as well as their personal aspirations.
